Aruba's Carnival Climaxes This Weekend

By: Darrell Busby

Special to Aruba Today

ORANJESTAD - Aruba's Carnival swings into high gear this weekend, as thousands of people from the Netherlands Antilles, the Netherlands and the USA join Arubans as they all culminate on the island to celebrate their 55th anniversary of playing mass Aruba style.

The main events take place this weekend, starting earlier this morning with the J'ouvert morning which means (Day Break) jump-up in San Nicolas, where thousands of people will gathered on the streets as they par took in the early morning party through the streets of San Nicolas. The J'ouvert began at 4AM and ended at sunrise. The Party doesn't stop there; everybody keeps the party going until the main parade in San Nicolas starts, where everybody will party till sundown again. This Saturday evening thousands of people flock to downtown to finish some minor decoration on their trailer which you can see lined up along the main BLVD and hangs out with friends, while they all eat and drink awaiting the parade.

Then on Sunday, February 22 starting at 11AM is Aruba's 55th Grand Carnival Parade in Oranjestad. This is the largest carnival parade through Oranjestad, on the Sunday before Ash Wednesday. This parade is filled with music and luxurious floats and costumes, in various designs and decorated with a wide variety of colorful stones and feathers, creating a unique display. This is considered Aruba's main event.

If you get to experience this landmark event which marks Aruba's 55th anniversary celebrating the carnival you will be one of the lucky ones.

As announced during General Assembly

AHATA seeks to safeguard Aruba's tourism through promotion, continued dialogue

ORANJESTAD – The Aruba Hotel and Tourism Association (AHATA) reconfirmed its 2009 goals during the General Assembly of its members, held recently at the Marriott Aruba. AHATA CEO & President Rob Smith addressed current challenges as well as outlined the association's efforts of establishing a strong marketing presence, continued dialogue with the public sector for advocacy goals, and ongoing cooperative efforts in reaching sustainable tourism objectives.

"The consequences are already being felt by the economic downturn, but there remains opportunities through continued promotion of the island to ensure that we do are best to mitigate the shortfalls.

We must also continue the dialogue of our advocacy efforts with current proposed changes to labor and tax laws," explains Rob Smith. "We are active not only in marketing the island of Aruba, but in keeping abreast and active on measures that affect the health of our industry and the well-being of the island's economy. Continued increases in taxation burden will not only affect the competitiveness of our destination at a time of worldwide economic strife, it could also affect the viability of the assets we represent.

In keeping the association on track toward reaching its goals, the new AHATA board for 2009 was officially installed. The new board consists of Chairman Rick Zeolla (Aruba Marriott), First Vice-Chair Alex Nieuwmeyer (Divi), Second Vice-Chair Warren Stanley (De Palm Tours), Treasurer Javier Wolter (CMB), Secretary Ewald Biemans (Bucuti), and Directors Susan Santiago (Hyatt Regency Aruba), Eduardo de Veer (Renaissance Aruba), Richard Roy (Westin), Louis Phillippe (Holiday Inn Sunspree Resort), Gary Jutz (Radisson Aruba), Joe Najjar (La Cabana Beach & Racquet Club), Edgar Roelofs (Manchebo) and Andres Pichardo (Occidental Grand). The majority of AHATA members were represented during the assembly, with attendance by numerous professionals in tourism and its related industries. Guest speakers included Myrna Jansen from the Aruba Tourism Authority (ATA), and Peggy Croes from the Aruba Airport Authority (AAA). For AHATA, additional speakers included Colleen LesSard -- pitch hitting for Sanju Luidens (while on maternity leave) – providing an overview on marketing efforts including show participation, airlift support and advertising, and Doreen Kralick on membership affairs, with new members for 2009 including Boolchand's, The Village and Morgan's Island waterpark. "Armed with the enormous amount of expertise represented by our members and partners, and a strong board, we maintain an informed and active role in ensuring Aruba remains a top tourism destination, under any given circumstances," comments Smith.

The overall conversation contributed to a better understanding of the island's position with the current economic state of affairs, as well as the opportunities still available through combined, proactive efforts. After an informative session, AHATA members and guests mixed and mingled to further discuss topics, both business- and community-related, in the social environment afforded by AHATA's "Networking in Style" event.

AHATA, whose member companies run the wide breadth of the tourism industry, from large hotel properties and timeshare resorts to activity companies and small service providers, utilizes the combined strength and knowledge of its members in supporting positive change locally as well as in acting internationally in carrying out marketing support for the destination of Aruba. AHATA, in cooperation with the Aruba Tourism Authority, is also responsible for the Aruba Convention Bureau in the U.S. □

Happy Anniversary to Ambassadors of Aruba

Ed & Kathy Nusbaum celebrate 20 years of matrimony

NOORD—On Wednesday February 17, 2009 a very familiar family walked through the doors at Buccaneer Restaurant. This lovely family was Ed and Kathy Nusbaum and their son Cody from Weston, Connecticut. This year Cody brought his best friend Casey O'Brien who is enjoying his first visit to the island. They are no strangers to Aruba with 29 years of returning to their home away from home. "We love Aruba for the friendly people and gorgeous weather, we love our resorts with A.B.C & Costa Linda and return every year to enjoy paradise", replied Kathy.

Ed & Kathy are celebrating 20 years of marriage; they celebrated at their favorite restaurant the Buccaneer which is an annual tradition for the past 29 years. Ed always loves the Duck entrée and decided to try the stuffed shrimp and loved his dinner but states that next year he wants his duck. Kathy's favorite is the appetizer Mushroom on toast and her son ate the ½ broiled chicken and Casey the poached Swordfish. The Buccaneer manager Vasty was happy to see them once again and recalls when Cody was just a baby and how fast he grew to be a young man. Happy Anniversary from the staff at Buccaneer Restaurant and have a safe trip home!!!

Parliament to get update on effects of financial crisis

WILLEMSTAD--The effects of the global financial meltdown on the Netherlands Antilles so far will be reported to the Central Committee of Parliament by Finance Minister Ersilia de Lannooy on Wednesday, February 25.

Parliament President Pedro Atacho said

via a teleconference this week that the finance minister will be accompanied by representatives of the Central Bank and the General Pension Fund APNA. Parliament has had periodic updates since the crisis began to intensify and the ripples have affected the Antilles.

Parliament will receive information earlier in the day about patient care offered by the Curaçao rehabilitation centre Brasami. Also on the agenda is a discussion about the package on civil servant pension rights.

The new general secretary of Parliament will take the oath of office Thursday afternoon.

The short week of meetings, due to Carnival celebrations in Curaçao, will close off with a visit to the government reformatory by the parliamentary committee on Public Health and Social Development on Friday at 2:00pm.

Meetings resume on Tuesday, March 2 with a presentation by Education Minister Omyra Leeflang and Finance Minister de Lannooy on the development at the University of the Netherlands Antilles (UNA) and related salary arguments.

The Kingdom Affairs and Inter-Parliamentary Relation committee will continue its preparations for the upcoming tripartite parliamentary meeting with Surinam and Aruba. A meeting will be held with Public Health Minister Leeflang to see where cooperation is possible in this area among the three countries. A similar session will be held with Economic Affairs Minister Elvis Tjin A Sjoie to see about cooperation in this area, Atacho told journalists gathered at parliament building.

The final point on parliament's agenda for the coming weeks is the formal exoneration of debts accumulated by Curaçao, Bonaire, St. Eustatius and Saba in accordance with the Ys Cabinet's 2004 Urgency Plan.

Curaçao will get a reprieve from NAf. 95 million from the Netherlands Antilles up to December 31, 2004. This amount was incurred mainly on budget loans.

Bonaire's debt amounts to NAf. 5.4 million, Saba NAf. 3.1 million, and St. Eustatius NAf. 2.3 were incurred for premium payments to the Social Insurance Bank SVB for government employees and their families.

The debt exoneration will be formalized with the approval of four law proposals by the central committee of parliament on Wednesday, March 4.

Rounding off the law proposals on the table is the approval of the bankruptcy settlement on the Parker Hotel. □

Ease out your week with Le Dôme's Sunday à la Carte Brunch It's more than a tradition... it is a culinary art by Le Dôme's Chef Michael van Dorst

LONDON/PARIS - The tradition of Brunch dates back to the 19th century. This blend of breakfast and lunch was founded on the principles of leisure of the privileged in Britain. Though, it didn't take long before the French adopted this rich tradition and turned it a true culinary art. In 1895 Guy Beringer wrote in a visionary article: "Brunch is cheerful, sociable and inciting. It is talk-compelling. It puts you in a good temper, it makes you satisfied with yourself and your fellow beings, and it sweeps away the worries of the week." Today the basic principles Beringer described so well, still stand. More than ever Sunday Brunch is a weekly highlight and gives many around the world the perfect moment for recapping and reflection.

new visual concept. The custom-designed costumes are sensual, daring, colorful, and luxurious and set "Havana Dance" apart from any other cabaret.

Legendary Reggae Band The Wailers to Headline The 29th Annual St. Maarten Heineken Regatta

St. Maarten, Netherlands Antilles [February 16, 2009]- The legendary Wailers, who are the greatest exponents of reggae music in the world, are now confirmed to headline the 29th St. Maarten Heineken Regatta on Sunday, March 8, 2009 as part of the Serious Fun celebrations. The band, recognized worldwide as the only group still capable of delivering Bob Marley's message of peace, love and equality will be performing on Kim Sha Beach to close out the Caribbean's largest regatta. The Wailers have brought reggae music to every corner of the globe, selling over 250 million albums and playing to an estimated 24 million people. The group is now led by bassist and musical director

Aston "Family Man" Barrett, the group's sole surviving founder and driving musical force, who was well known as Bob Marley's right hand-man during the singer's lifetime. The current Wailers - a group that's one of the last, great reggae institutions - refuses to live off past glories; where "Family Man" represents tried and trusted roots authenticity, singer Elan Atias, injects fresh excitement into a show that continues to attract enthusiastic audiences from around the world. "The Wailers are one of the legendary Caribbean bands that have helped define reggae music," says John Leone, Director of Heineken St Maarten. "They have brought reggae out of the Caribbean and onto the world music scene for all to enjoy. Although we certainly can never replace Bob Marley, Peter Tosh and others from the original band, the band still drives on to spread great music and great times all over the world. I feel the Wailer's music is just the message we all need to hear right now. Imagine your feet in the sand on a beautiful night, surrounded by people from all over the world together singing 'One Love' and 'Don't worry... about a thing...' 'Cause every little thing... is gonna be alright!' We are honored to have them perform here for the St. Maarten Heineken Regatta, it will be a performance to remember, a whole day to be enjoyed, and a St. Maarten Heineken Regatta to never forget!" "The Heineken St. Maarten Regatta is globally renowned for its commitment to Serious Fun by annually presenting the best in music to its international sailing competitors and the local audience" said Christine Hansen, President & CEO of Thirty-Three Productions, Inc. "We are thrilled to bring the legendary Wailers for the 29th Anniversary and to again deliver world class talent to Heineken and the people of St. Maarten for this year's Regatta." Closing out the regatta will be a day of reggae music on Kim

Sha Beach, The organizers are calling the day "Reggae-gatta", a fun mix of Reggae and Regatta. The "Reggae-gatta" festivities on Sunday are planned for the whole family to enjoy with food, drinks and great music.

The day's line-up will have the best of the local reggae bands Ras Bushman, Barbwire Band, Roots down below and the internationally renown home-grown heroes Orange Grove. Sunday activities will kick off at 12:00PM noon. The four-day event concludes with The Wailers' performance later that night and promises to be an unforgettable experience. No time to lose

All indications are that Curaçao will go to the polls for the island's third constitutional referendum in 15 years on May 8, a date that may prove important for St. Maarten as well. After all, if a majority says "no" to the question whether they approve of the result of the Round Table Conference (RTC) to come to an autonomous Curaçao within the Kingdom, it could have consequences for the dismantling of the Netherlands Antilles and for St. Maarten obtaining that same status. It "could," but "shouldn't," because it simply wouldn't be fair to St. Maarten, which already had to endure a considerable delay when the former Island Government coalition of Curaçao first rejected the Final Statement agreed on by all Kingdom partners involved at the table, only for the current coalition to reverse that decision and get the constitutional change process back on track later.

Realistically speaking, however, a "no" vote in Curaçao can in any case be expected to delay the process for St. Maarten to become an autonomous country as well, taking into account that the question "what now?" when it comes to the dismantling of the Netherlands Antilles would have to be answered. Even with a "yes" vote in Curaçao, the current target date of early 2010 for the new relations changes to take effect will be difficult to make at best. However, doing so is becoming increasingly important for several reasons.

In addition to the fact that any more delays after at least two target dates were already changed will further de-motivate the people and erode much-needed support for the process, the economic problems the Netherlands too is feeling after years of prosperity almost certainly will divert attention from the islands and make getting things done for them more difficult. Not only that, but the political climate in the Netherlands is changing and the right-wing politicians who basically view the Dutch Caribbean as a nuisance are receiving more and more support among the electorate. If the changes agreed on are going to be realised, it needs to happen now, but because Curaçao chose to have the referendum St. Maarten has little choice but to prepare a fall-back position in case of a "no" vote. In doing so, however, the choice of the majority to step out of the Antilles but remain in the Kingdom must be respected at all times. □

Obama tries to halt talk of bank nationalization

By BEN FELLER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The White House on Friday insisted it's not trying to take over two ailing financial institutions, even as stocks tumbled again. On Wall Street, talk of nationalization of Citigroup Inc., and Bank of America Corp., prompted investors to continue to balk, worried that the government would have to take control and wipe out shareholders in the process. Citigroup fell 20 percent, while Bank of America fell 12 percent in afternoon trading but also came off their lowest levels.

"This administration continues to strongly believe that a privately held banking system is the correct way to go, ensuring that they are regulated sufficiently by this government," White House press secretary Robert Gibbs said when asked about nationalizing the banks.

"That's been our belief for quite some time, and we continue to have that," Gibbs said.

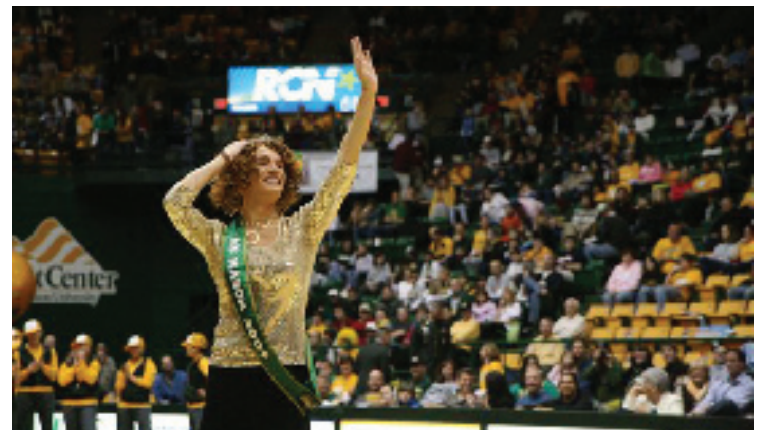

Investors have shown decreasing confidence that U.S. banks can right themselves. Citigroup and Bank of America have already received significant help from taxpayers as the government has rushed in to try to save the financial sector, which has been choked by bad assets and seen the flow of credit shrink.

The speculation about the two banks' future continued to take a direct toll on the market.

Gibbs was pressed for more details on his answer — specifically whether Obama would not nationalize banks. He said it was hard for him to be any clearer.

When a reporter suggested Gibbs could do that by saying point blank that Obama would never nationalize banks, Gibbs would not make that statement, but emphasized: "I think I was very clear about the system that this country has and will continue to have." □

Illinois Gov. Pat Quinn responds to a question after calling on Sen. Roland Burris, D-Ill., to resign during a news conference in Chicago, Friday, Feb. 20, 2009.

Associated Press

By DEANNA BELLANDI

Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO—U.S. Sen. Roland

Burris kept out of sight Friday

as longtime friend Gov. Pat

Quinn joined the roster of

Ill. governor: Burris should resign from U.S. Senate

fellow Democrats calling for his resignation following new disclosures about his controversial appointment, while the White House urged the senator to take the weekend to consider his future.

Burris began the week with passionate defenses, proclaiming he had nothing to hide even as revelations mounted about his attempts to raise money for his disgraced patron, former Gov. Rod Blagojevich, and his failures to disclose multiple conversations with Blagojevich advisers.

By Friday, Burris eluded reporters and only repeated pleas through his spokesman to “stop the rush to judgment.” The junior senator scheduled private visits to a veterans medical center and naval training center north of Chicago but did not speak publicly.

Quinn praised Burris, a former Illinois attorney general, as an honorable man and said Friday it would be a “heroic act” for him to put the interests of the state and his constituents ahead of his own.

“It takes a great deal of fortitude and courage to do that and I think people will recognize that,” Quinn said. “It’s never easy to step aside and resign from anything in life, especially something as important as United States Senate.”

Burris, meanwhile, gave no indication he would heed the calls to give up the coveted seat.

“Like he said before, he’s asked the public and officials to stop the rush to judgment and to allow all of the facts to come out,” spokesman Jim O’Connor said.

Burris testified before the Illinois House committee that recommended Blagojevich’s impeachment in January that he hadn’t contacted key Blagojevich staffers or offered anything in return for the Senate seat vacated by President Barack Obama. Blagojevich faces federal charges that he tried to sell the seat.

Last weekend, however, Burris released an affidavit saying he had spoken to several Blagojevich advisers, including the former governor’s brother and finance chairman, who Burris said called three times last fall asking for fundraising help.

Burris this week acknowledged trying, unsuccessfully, to raise money for Blagojevich.

Illinois lawmakers have asked prosecutors to look into perjury charges, and a preliminary U.S. Senate Ethics Committee inquiry is under way. State Rep. Jack Franks introduced a resolution urging the Illinois Senate Ethics Committee to expel Burris.

In the event Burris resigns or is expelled, Quinn has implored lawmakers to quickly pass legislation, already introduced by Franks, to fill any Senate vacancy by special election rather than gubernatorial appointment.

Quinn wants the Illinois Legislature to allow him to name a temporary replacement to a vacant seat until a special election could be held. He declined to say who he might appoint if Burris steps aside.

“At no time should our state go without full and fair representation in the United States Senate,” Quinn said.

Illinois Republicans don’t want to wait for Burris to quit and are calling for a May 26 election even if he doesn’t resign.

The GOP argues Burris’ appointment is only good until the next election, so they want to move up the next one and let voters decide — effectively kicking him out of he doesn’t win.

Illinois lawmakers had considered stripping Blagojevich of his Senate appointment powers after his Dec. 9 arrest on federal corruption charges, but they couldn’t agree on legislation. Blagojevich shocked everyone by naming Burris to the seat Dec. 30.

Rikeesha Phelon, a spokeswoman for Illinois Senate President John Cullerton, said the Democrat was “open” to special elections but has not committed to a proposal. Cullerton has not called for Burris’ resignation, saying he wants investigations to play out. Democratic House Speaker Michael Madigan’s spokesman, Steve Brown, said they’re reviewing proposed legislation, including where special election funding would come from.

GOP state Sen. Matt Murphy has estimated a special election could cost $5 million to $25 million.

Quinn said money shouldn’t hinder voters from picking their next senator. □

AP IMPACT: Most fertility clinics break the rules

By STEPHANIE NANO

Associated Press Write

NEW YORK — The California fertility doctor who implanted the octuplet mom with lots of embryos was no lone wolf: Fewer than 20 percent of U.S. clinics follow professional guidelines on how many embryos should be used for younger women. “Clearly, most programs are not adhering to the guidelines,” said Dr. Bradley Van Voorhis, director of the fertility clinic at the University of Iowa.

The furor over Nadya Suleman and her octuplets has brought scrutiny to U.S. fertility clinics and how well they observe the guidelines, which are purely voluntary. The controversy had led to talk of passing laws to regulate clinics, something that has already been done in Western Europe.

“There are enough clinics that quite openly flout professional guidelines that we really do need to start thinking about public policy in this area,” said Marcy Darnovsky of the Oakland, Calif.-based Center for Genetics and Society, a public interest group. “I think it’s way overdue.”

The 20 percent figure is contained in reports filed by clinics with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Fertility doctors say there are many reasons clinics skirt the guidelines: pressure from patients who want to use more embryos to improve their chances of getting pregnant; financial concerns from those who are paying for their treatment out of their own pockets; and the competition among clinics to post good success rates.

And the only penalty for violating the guidelines is expulsion from some of the industry’s professional organizations, though that can affect whether insurance companies will cover a clinic’s treatments.

“You have patients who are desperate and you have doctors who are driven by success rates. It’s not a good combination,” said Pamela Madsen, founder and former head of the American Fertility Association.

When the guidelines were issued in 1996 by the American Society of Reproductive Medicine, the intent was to cut down the number of multiple births, particularly triplets and higher, that can result when many embryos are implanted and more than one takes. Big multiple births can lead to disastrous, life-threatening complications, lifelong disabilities such as cerebral palsy, and crushing medical costs.

The guidelines suggest how many embryos doctors should use, with the number varying by age and other factors. They also allow for some flexibility for more if previous attempts have failed or the embryo quality is poor.

“These decisions are complex and need to be individualized, which is why we strongly believe that guidelines are better than hard rules,” said Dr. David Adamson, a former president of the reproductive medicine society.

The group credits the guidelines with reducing triplets and higher multiple pregnancies from 7 percent of attempts to 2 percent in 2006. Nearly two-thirds of the procedures involved four or more embryos in 1996; that has fallen to 16 percent.

But for women under 35, government records show that just 83 of 426 clinics followed the guidance calling for one and no more than two embryos. The average for fresh embryos (as opposed to frozen) implanted in women in that age group ranged from a 1.4 to 4.8. The vast majority of the clinics averaged between two and three embryos.

Dr. Mousa Shamonki, director of the IVF program at the University of California, Los Angeles, said his patients frequently ask for more embryos to boost their chances of getting pregnant. He tells patients that it’s not OK to end up with triplets or even twins. “The only thing that happens when you add additional embryos is you’re increasing the multiple pregnancy rate,” he said. “You’re rarely increasing the overall pregnancy rate significantly.”

The UCLA program had one of the highest transfer rates in

The entrance to Dr. Michael Kamrava’s office is seen in Beverly Hills, Calif., Monday, Feb. 9, 2009. The mother who gave birth to octuplets identified the West Coast IVF Clinic in Beverly Hills as the one which provided in-vitro fertilization for all 14 of her children.

Associated Press

2006 for younger women. That rate — 3.5 embryos per cycle — matched that of the West Coast IVF Clinic in Beverly Hills, Calif., where Suleman was treated. Shamonki said changes he implemented after he took over drove down UCLA’s rate to 2.1 embryos the next year.

Fertility specialists have attacked Suleman’s doctor, Michael Kamrava, for using so many embryos. Suleman, 33, has said she had six embryos implanted; two presumably split. She said she refused selective abortion to reduce the number, which is a common option in such cases. Kamrava has declined requests for interviews.

The reproductive medicine society and the Medical Board of California are looking into the case. □

Obama warns mayors not to waste stimulus money

President Barack Obama addresses mayors from across the country, Friday, Feb. 20, 2009, in the East Room of the White House in Washington. A teleprompter, with a chandelier reflected in it is seen at right.

WASHINGTON — Invoking his own name-and-shame policy, President Barack Obama warned the nation's mayors on Friday that he will "call them out" if they waste the money from his massive economic stimulus plan.

"The American people are watching," Obama told a gathering of mayors at the White House. "They need this plan to work. They expect to see the money that they've earned — they've worked so hard to earn — spent in its intended purposes without waste, without inefficiency, without fraud."

In the days since the White House and Congress came to terms on the $787 billion economic package, the political focus has shifted to how it will work. Obama has staked his reputation not just on the promise of 3.5 million jobs saved or created, but also on a pledge to let the public see where the money goes.

His budget chief this week released a 25,000-word document that details exactly how Cabinet and executive agencies, states and local organizations must report spending. It is a system meant to streamline reports so they can be displayed on the administration's new Web site, Recovery.gov.

Using his presidential pulpit, Obama demanded accountability, from his friends in local government as well as his own agencies. He said the new legislation gives him tools to "watch the taxpayers' money with more rigor and transparency than ever," and that he will use them.

"If a federal agency proposes a project that will waste that money, I will not hesitate to call them out on it, and put a stop to it," he said. "I want everyone here to be on notice that if a local government does the same, I will call them out on it, and use the full power of my office and our administration to stop it."

Miami Mayor Manny Diaz, who leads the U.S. Conference of Mayors, said he welcomed Obama's warning.

"Absolutely. We get called out every day at the local level," Diaz said, drawing laughs from other mayors in a gathering with reporters on the White House driveway. "We have plenty of constituents who will be doing that before the president does."

Mayors of both parties said they appreciated the invitation to meet with Obama, Vice President Joe Biden and a handful of Cabinet secretaries. They cautioned, though, that the stimulus plan will only work if leaders at the state level direct the money to their cities in a clear, timely way.

The economic plan will inject a sudden boost of cash into transportation, education, energy and health care. Beyond new spending, it aims to aid people through a package of tax cuts, extended unemployment benefits and short-term health insurance help. The cost will be added to a growing budget deficit.

Obama said government leaders have asked for the "unprecedented trust of the American people."

"With that comes unprecedented obligations to spend that money wisely, free from politics and free from personal agendas," he said.

The president did not specify how, exactly, he would call out one of his own agencies or a local government about wasteful projects. □

But he considers the victory one of his happiest moments and proof that the suburban Washington, D.C., school famous for its run to the Final Four a few years back celebrates its diverse student body.

"I was very touched by how Mason was so supportive through the whole process of allowing a boy in a dress to run for homecoming queen," Allen said in a phone interview. "It says a lot about the campus that not only do we have diversity but we celebrate it."

The senior from Virginia's Goochland County won the pageant Saturday at a sold-out Homecoming basketball game against Northeastern University.

Large portions of the crowd cheered as Allen, wearing a gold-sequined top, accepted the tiara and the Ms. Mason 2009 sash.

The school, known for racial diversity and a basketball team that pulled off a string of upsets to advance to the Final Four in 2006, was selected the nation's top "school to watch" in the most recent U.S. News and World Report rankings.

Allen's selection does not appear to have caused much consternation among the school's 30,000 undergraduate and graduate students. An online article in the student newspaper prompted only two comments, both positive.

Alyssa Cordova, an officer with the school's College Republicans, said she didn't pay much attention to Allen's election and is surprised by the media attention it has received.

"I just think it's kind of silly," she said. Mara Keisling, executive director of the National Center for Transgender Equity and a former adjunct professor at Mason, said the lack of controversy "shows that the students and the George Mason community have a good sense of perspective." University spokesman Dan Walsch said the school is "very comfortable" with Allen's selection and the contest rules are not sex-specific.

"It's just that if you're a man who runs for Ms., you've got to dress the part," Walsch said.

The contest was half talent judging and half voting by the student body. Allen received the most votes but doesn't know how he scored in the talent competition, in which he performed in zebra-print pants and lip-synched to Britney Spears. He said his drag queen persona is fairly popular and well-known on campus — he has hosted events as Reann for the school's Pride Week, as well as HIV charity shows and an amateur drag night cabaret. "Reann is very sassy, very silly. She's an entertainer throughout. She's not afraid to do a high kick if that's what it takes," Allen said. "She's got a little camp but is not as campy as some queens." □

By RAPHAEL G. SATTER

Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — A former U.K. resident who alleges he was tortured while in U.S. custody will soon be released from Guantanamo Bay and sent back to Britain, authorities said Friday.

Binyam Mohamed — accused by U.S. authorities of conspiring to take part in a dirty bomb plot and training in al-Qaida camps — was kept at the military prison camp even though charges against him were dropped in October.

The announcement of his release had been widely anticipated after President Barack Obama took office pledging to close Guantanamo and return as many detainees as possible to their home countries. Britain's foreign secretary, David Miliband, has been lobbying for Mohamed's return to Britain since 2007.

Three other men with ties to Britain — Jordanian Jamil el-Banna, Libyan-born Omar Deghayes and Algerian Abdenmour Sameur — were returned from Guantanamo in December 2007.

At the time, the U.S. cited "additional security concerns" for its refusal to return Mohamed and another former U.K. resident, Saudi-born Shaker Aamer.

Aamer remains at Guantanamo Bay, and British authorities have said they are not actively seeking his return. The U.S. has accused him of having links to al-Qaida, but he denies the allegations and has not been charged.

It was not immediately clear when exactly Mohamed, 30, would be back in Britain. He had been on hunger strike for more than a month to protest his detention, but Britain's Foreign Office said a British doctor had examined him and found him medically fit to travel.

U.S. Navy Cmdr. Jeffrey Gordon, a Pentagon spokesman, said that as a matter of policy the military does not comment on transfers from Guantanamo until they are completed.

Mohamed, an Ethiopian refugee who moved to Britain when he was 15, was arrested in Pakistan on a visa violation and turned over to his American authorities, according to human rights group Reprieve.

Mohamed alleges he was beaten in Pakistan and tortured in Morocco and Afghanistan before being moved to the U.S. facility in Cuba in September 2004. Washington has never publicly acknowledged extraordinary renditions to places such as Morocco and still refuses to say where Mohamed was before he was taken to Guantanamo.

His case caused concern in Britain when it was disclosed that Mohamed had been interviewed by British intelligence before his transfer to Guantanamo. Mohamed's lawyers allege that intelligence had evidence that he was being mistreated, but British Prime Minister Gordon Brown has insisted that U.K. always acted lawfully, telling reporters last week there had been "no cover up whatsoever" in the case.

Mohamed's lawyer military lawyer, Air Force Lt. Col. Yvonne Bradley, said she was pleased Mohamed's long detention was coming to an end.

"It's been a very long time," Bradley said. "We're all happy he's finally being released and we've been able to get him back." She said Mohamed's health will be monitored on the flight back from Cuba.

The Foreign Office said Mohamed would be returned to the U.K. "as soon as the practical arrangements can be made," but added that does not mean he can stay in the country indefinitely.

"His immigration status will be reviewed following his return and the same security considerations will apply to him as would apply to any other foreign national in this country," the Foreign Office said.

Reprieve, the human rights group, said his legal residency in the U.K. expired because he was prevented from renewing it while being detained.

Amnesty International also welcomed news of the release, but said the U.K. needed "a proper independent inquiry into Binyam's case and allegations of a cover-up of torture."

Britain's attorney general, Baroness Patricia Scotland, began an inquiry into her country's handling of Mohamed's case in October but has yet to deliver a report.

MEXICAN COPS

The slayings were a chilling sign that criminal gangs are determined to control the police force of the biggest Mexican border city, with a population of 1.3 million people across from El Paso, Texas.

Ciudad Juarez police have long come under attack, and many officers have quit out of fear for their lives, some after their names appeared on hit lists left in public throughout the city. Police officer Cesar Ivan Portillo was the fifth officer killed this week in Mexico's deadliest city.

Police already were on "red alert" — meaning they could not patrol alone — after cardboard signs with handwritten messages appeared taped to the doors and windows of businesses Wednesday, warning that one officer would be killed every 48 hours if Public Safety Secretary Roberto Orduna does not quit.

Mayor Jose Reyes Ferriz insisted Friday that he would not back down.

"We will not allow the control of the police force to fall in the hands of criminal gangs," he said.

More than 6,000 people have been killed in drug violence across Mexico over the past year as gangs battle each other for territory and to fight off a nationwide crackdown by the army. Nearly a third of the slayings have taken place in Ciudad Juarez, and more than 50 of those dead are city police officers.

Violence also has spilled across the border into the U.S., where authorities report a spike in killings, kidnappings and home invasions connected to Mexico's murderous cartels.

Homeland Security officials have said they will bring in the military if the violence continues to grow and threatens the U.S. border region.

"The violence is spreading like wildfire across the Rio Grande," said George Greyson, a Mexico expert at the College of William & Mary in Virginia. "It's a major national security problem for us that is much more important than Iraq and Afghanistan."

Also Friday, the U.S. State Department renewed a travel advisory warning Americans about the increased violence along the U.S.-Mexico border.

Some Mexicans have questioned whether President Felipe Calderon's two-year, nationwide crackdown on drug gangs was worth all the killings.

But Calderon and his administration have defended the fight, with Economy Secretary Gerard Ruin Mattes saying on Wednesday that if Mexico gave up its fight against the cartels, "the next president of the republic would be a drug dealer."

Portillo and city jail guard Juan Palo Ruin were killed as they left their homes before dawn to head to work, city spokesman Jaime Toreros said.

Three days earlier, assailants fatally shot police operations director Sacramento Peruse, the chief's right-hand man, and three other officers who were sitting with him in a patrol car near the U.S. consulate.

The bodies of Peruse and one of the officers were sent to their home states Thursday to be buried, and the city planned to hold a ceremony Friday for the two others from Ciudad Juarez.

City spokesman Jaime Toreros said police have been asked to patrol with their guns in their hands.

Reyes Ferriz earlier ordered police to travel in groups of three patrol cars, with two officers in each vehicle.

Orduna has not spoken publicly since the threats. A retired army major, he took over as chief in May after former Public Safety Secretary Guillermo Prieto resigned and fled to El Paso following the slaying of his operations director.

For Orduna's protection, the city has built his bedroom at the police station so he does not have to go home. He also travels in different vehicles when he does go out. □

The best Brazilian Steakhouse in Aruba! Serving the Island's most exquisite deserts...

Texas de Brazil offers light and healthy eating

PALM BEACH - The health and calorie conscious among us need fear steakhouses no more. Whether it's a low-carb, low-fat, or even vegetarian diet you follow, Texas de Brazil Churrascaria fits into just about every dieter's menu plan. Low carb eaters will have all their expectations surpassed with a tempting carnivorous selection of umpteen cuts of sizzling beef, pork, lamb, sausage, and poultry. The meats are prepared in the healthiest style of cooking—slow roasting—where much of the fat drips off in the roasting process, so those looking for a lower fat option to sautéing, pan frying, or deep frying will also be able to indulge.

The Brazilian-style steakhouse also offers up a garden full of healthy eats on a lavish 40-item seasonal salad bar, giving dieters plenty to choose from to accompany the slow-roasted meats. A selection of fresh lettuces and vegetables may be standard for most salad bars, but Texas de Brazil's version goes a gourmet twist further, treating the palate to additional items like marinated portabella mushrooms, sweet roasted bell peppers, hearts of palm, sundried tomatoes, imported cheeses—including fresh buffalo mozzarella—sushi, homemade soups, and much more. The salad bar is included in the continuous service meal with unlimited choices from the grilled meats, but for vegetarians or the non-meat eaters, a special price is offered for just the salad bar.

Of course, for those looking to splurge while on vacation, Texas de Brazil will gladly serve their garlic mashed potatoes, traditional fried plantains, and their world-famous parmesan cheese bread as part of the meal decorations are invariably stunning. The chocolaterie's small terrace is doing a booming business as a café and cappuccinos, lattes and frappes are served with delicious pastries, cakes or sandwiches. Seated in a comfortable chair one can witness formerly drooping shoppers continue their quest revived and full of energy after a spell at Taste of Belgium

TASTE OF BELGIUM

The chocolaterie forms part of the 'One delicious island' Taste of Belgium family, which consists of the popular Bistro in the Paseo Herencia Mall across from the Holiday Inn Resort, the recently opened Papillon Restaurant at The Village, where casual fine dining and a superb French-Caribbean cuisine is drawing those with unerringly good taste, and the Taste of Belgium Catering Service at Bubali for any of your parties, luncheons, dinners, weddings or receptions.

Raiders break record to re-sign Nnamdi Asomugha

By GREG BEACHAM

AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND, California (AP) — Cornerback Nnamdi Asomugha became the highest paid defensive back in NFL history when he re-signed with the Oakland Raiders on Thursday, agreeing to a three-year, $45.3 million deal. Asomugha, who's heading into his seventh NFL season, is one of the league's elite cover defenders. He was selected for the Pro Bowl and chosen to the AP All-Pro team last season despite getting just one interception because Oakland's opponents rarely dared to throw to his side of the field.

Asomugha is guaranteed $28.5 million in the first two years of the contract. The Raiders have an option for a third year in 2011, which would be worth either $16.8 million or the amount of the quarterback franchise tag, whichever is greater.

It was the second major re-signing in two days for the Raiders to negate potential free agency departures. On Wednesday, Oakland re-signed All-Pro Shane Lechler to a four-year contract that was the biggest given to a punter in NFL history.

Raiders owner Al Davis had been unsure whether to use his franchise player tag on Lechler or Asomugha, who got it last season. Instead, he paid top dollar to keep both. □

Venus beats Serena in Dubai semifinals

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Venus Williams beat younger sister Serena 6-1, 2-6, 7-6 (3) Friday to reach the final of the Dubai Tennis Championship.

The sixth-seeded Venus dominated the first set at the Aviation Club as Serena struggled with her serves.

"I loved the way the first set went," said Venus, who will face Virginie Razzano of France in Saturday's final. "I just had two second serves in the whole of the first set."

Venus now leads the career series between the American sisters 10-9.

"I think my serve has gone somewhere on vacation and I need to go there and catch up with it," said Serena, the Australian Open champion. "Venus played well, and served really well, which was the difference."

Serena hit her first ace in the second game of the second set to save a break point, and then hit another to make it 1-1 before breaking her sister twice. "She fought back well after that, and I was still trying to finish the points quickly in the second set," Venus said. "But when I saw that she was playing better, I had to change my game

Judge bars use of drug tests in Bonds' trial

Illston said the urine samples that tested positive for steroids are inadmissible because prosecutors cannot prove conclusively that they belong to Bonds. The judge also barred prosecutors from showing jurors so-called doping calendars that Bonds' personal trainer, Greg Anderson, allegedly maintained for the slugger.

The judge said prosecutors need direct testimony from Anderson to introduce such evidence. Anderson's attorney said the trainer will refuse to testify at Bonds' trial even though he is likely to be sent to prison on contempt of court charges.

Prosecutors could not immediately be reached to determine whether they planned an appeal, which would delay the start of the scheduled March 2 trial.

Bonds has pleaded not guilty to lying to a grand jury on Dec. 4, 2003 when he denied knowingly using performance-enhancing drugs.

Prosecutors allege Anderson collected the urine samples and delivered them for testing to the Bay Area Laboratory Co-Operative.

During a September 2003 raid, federal investigators seized the positive test results that they allege belong to Bonds along with 21 other blood and urine samples that tested negative.

Prosecutors wanted to use all the tests to show that Bonds was a knowledgeable steroids consumer because he was a frequent customer of BALCO, the center of a massive sports doping ring.

Prosecutors said the three key tests show positive results in 2000 and 2001 for the steroids nandrolone and methenolone. Sports Illustrated has reported that Alex Rodriguez also tested positive for methenolone in 2003. □

a bit."

The sisters traded breaks in the third set.

"I was pleased with the win, but I would have been more pleased if it was the final," Venus said. "It definitely was a final-quality match. After all, she is the No. 1 player in the world and we are the best players in the world. She is one player I respect most on the tour, so it feels very satisfying."

Serena appeared to be bothered by a lingering knee injury which forced her to pull out of last week's Open GDF Suez semifinals.

"I am looking forward to a break before I play Miami," Serena said. "I really need it and I think it will be good for my knee. I have never played so much tennis in my whole career." Razzano beat 16th-seeded Kaia Kanepi of Estonia 6-1, 6-2. The 58th-ranked Frenchwoman had already upset second-seeded Dinara Safina and fifth-seeded Vera Zvonareva in Dubai.

"I am not surprised at my results here," Razzano said. "I know I have the tennis in me to beat the top-ranked players. And I worked very hard on my game during the winter break and I am feeling good about it."

Down a break in the first game of the second set, Kanepi rallied to get to 2-2 but then faded again.

"After a few good matches, I was really looking forward to this one, but nothing worked for me," Kanepi said. "I struggled with my serve, my returns and my overall game."

The Dubai Tennis Championship attracted a quality field this year, with nine of the WTA Tour's top 10 players in the draw. But it was overshadowed by the refusal to allow Israeli player Shahar Peer into the country. Organizers said they feared fan anger over Israel's recent military offensive in the Gaza Strip would spill into riots in the Arab country if Peer were to play.

On Thursday, however, the country said it was issuing a special permit for Israeli tennis player Andy Ram so he can play in next week's men's tournament. □

Former San Francisco Giants baseball player Barry Bonds, left, leaves the federal courthouse in San Francisco on Tuesday, Feb. 17, 2009. Bonds is charged with lying to a grand jury by saying he never knowingly used performance-enhancing drugs.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The government's case against Barry Bonds has suffered a setback.

A federal judge ruled Thursday that prosecutors cannot show jurors three positive steroid tests and other key evidence in the slugger's trial next month.

Jazz rally to beat Celtics 90-85

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Jazz rallied from an 11-point deficit to beat a rusty-looking Boston Celtics 90-85 on Thursday.

The Celtics were playing for the first time in a week and lost All-Star forward Kevin Garnett late in the second quarter with a strained right knee.

Deron Williams had 18 points and 10 assists to spark the Jazz, which outscored Boston 30-19 in the fourth quarter, closing the game on an 8-2 run.

Mehmet Okur led Utah with 19 points and reserve Matt Harpring had eight points and a clutch rebound as the Jazz pulled away in the final minute.

Paul Pierce's 20 points led the Celtics, who missed a chance to overtake Cleveland for the Eastern Conference's best percentage record.

Boston had a giant scare late in the first half when Garnett hopped to the locker room on one foot after injuring his right knee. Garnett hurt himself while going up for an alley-oop late in the first half. He warmed up with his teammates before the second half, but the Celtics weren't going to take any chances.

The Jazz got within three or four points several times, but couldn't catch the Celtics until midway through the fourth quarter.

Neither team led by more than three until the Jazz pulled away at the end. Harpring's 15-foot jumper put Utah up 85-83 with 1:01 left, then he pulled down the rebound after Ray Allen missed on a layup. Williams added a jumper from the top of the key to put the Jazz up by four and Utah held on the rest of the way.

Spurs 83, Pistons 79

In Auburn Hills, Michigan, San Antonio ended a three-game road losing streak by beating Detroit, boosting the Spurs' lead in the Southwest Division to 3-1/2 games.

Tim Duncan had 18 points and 18 rebounds and Tony Parker added 19 points and 11 assists for San Antonio.

Detroit's Allen Iverson led all scorers with 31 points.

San Antonio led 64-58 going into the fourth, but the Pistons it back to 78-77 with 3 minutes to play. Two stops gave the Pistons a pair of chances to take the lead, and Iverson took advantage of the second with a layup with 1:21 to go.

Rasheed Wallace fouled Parker, who gave San Antonio a 80-79 lead from the line, and Iverson missed at the other end.

Wallace grabbed a rebound with 28 seconds left and had a chance to put Detroit back in front, but missed a fadeaway. Bruce Bowen was fouled before he could call timeout. □

Venezolanos ricos dicen Chávez los llevó a invertir con Stanford

CARACAS (Reuters) - Venezolanos de clase media y ricos confiaron su dinero al grupo financiero de tejano Allen Stanford, acusado de un "fraude masivo", porque creían que sus ahorros estaban más seguros allí que en los bancos del país gobernado por el presidente Hugo Chávez. Los fondos de venezolanos representarían más de una cuarta parte de los 8.000 millones de dólares que los investigadores de Estados Unidos dicen fue invertido en certificados de depósitos fraudulentos por parte de Stanford con tasas de interés sospechosamente altas. El Gobierno local debió intervenir el jueves al banco comercial Stanford, una pequeña operación del holding, después de que la noticia del fraude en Estados Unidos desatara una corrida de depósitos. Venezolanos ricos y de clase media dicen sentirse intimidados por Chávez y su discurso populista. Además, impuso límites al flujo de divisas y ha expropiado compañías y tierras. Pero quienes confiaron en el multimillonario Stanford, ahora tienen un nuevo problema. El regulador bancario estima que los venezolanos han invertido más de 2.000 millones de dólares en sus compañías offshore. "Amamos a ese hombre como amamos a Chávez", dijo irónicamente un elegante y joven inversionista mientras fumaba en una oficina de Stanford, donde centenares de clientes acudieron esta semana desesperadamente en busca de su dinero. Después del colapso financiero en la década de 1990, los venezolanos elevaron sus ahorros en el exterior, incluso antes de que llegara Chávez a la presidencia. Ahora, asustados porque la "revolución socialista" pueda finalmente llevarlos a dejar el país, creyeron que era aún mejor momento para dejar su dinero invertido en el exterior. "A la hora de tener que correr de Venezuela es importante tener algo afuera", dijo Mónica Peña, quien invirtió su herencia familiar en Stanford por sus altas tasas de interés. La inflación del país sudamericano, exportador de crudo, supera las tasas ofrece la banca a cuentas de ahorro y los venezolanos, como muchos otros en la región, ven el dólar como una moneda segura. Chávez, estrecho aliado de Cuba, ha exacerbado la ansiedad con acciones contra el sector privado, como estatizaciones. ¿Dónde vas con tus cuatro lochas? Uno no puede confiar en la banca de aquí y tampoco quieres tener mucho dinero a la mano porque este Gobierno todo te lo quiere quitar", dijo una mujer cuya familia confió a Stanford unos 250.000 dólares.

"Este loco que tenemos aquí te hace sentir que todo tu dinero se te convierte en agua", agregó. Muchos inversionistas

pidieron no ser nombrados porque no quieren ser vistos como adinerados y ser blanco de delincuentes. □
